CRIMINAL DEFENSE INVESTIGATION TRAINING COUNCIL CODE OF ETHICS

PREAMBLE

The fundamental philosophical assumption upon which all CDITC policies are predicated is that the criminal defense investigator must be an impartial and objective seeker of truth. The investigator is an independent critical and creative thinker with a unique analytical role in the criminal justice system. He is not a law enforcement officer, lawyer, or paralegal. Thus he does not function as an advocate on behalf of any party or interest in any case for which he is responsible. The criminal defense investigator must critically evaluate information without pre-established opinions, assumptions, or biases regarding any issue of fact or theory in any case for which he is responsible.

The criminal defense investigator's commitment to objective, impartial analysis in the search for absolute truth requires, paradoxically, an acknowledgement of his own epistemological relativity, which yields only subjective and partial answers to the questions he asks. In fact, it is the awareness of his own subjective intellectual pre-dispositions that ultimately enables the investigator to become open-minded and objective in his thinking. Knowledge, to be legitimized, must be criticized. Truth, to be believed, must first be doubted.

The intellectual and ethical responsibility for this most rigorous standard of investigative inquiry is embodied in the CDITC imperative: "Mandamus Veritas".

ETHICAL IMPERATIVES

- 1) The criminal defense investigator will adhere absolutely and unconditionally to the objective and impartial search for truth. He will abstain from involvement in any situation that subverts this professional commitment.
- 2) The criminal defense investigator will refrain from asserting, in any professional capacity, any beliefs, opinions, or biases regarding any person or situation under investigation, prior to having commenced the investigation. Nor will the investigator permit any pre-established beliefs, opinions, or biases to influence the course of an investigation to be undertaken.
- 3) The criminal defense investigator should never, as a matter of policy, claim to have attained absolute or conclusive truth regarding the scope of any investigation. As a matter of policy, investigative truths should always remain potentially open to reinterpretation as new facts or theories emerge. In principle the investigative process should remain speculative rather than dogmatic.
- 4) The criminal defense investigator will be absolutely and unconditionally honest in all reporting to clients. The investigator will make no dishonest representation of any fact, issue, or theory relating to any case for which he is responsible.
- 5) The criminal defense investigator will be truthful and open in all communication to colleagues and the public, except in so far as such communication may compromise client confidentiality
- 6) The criminal defense investigator will honor, absolutely and unconditionally the confidentiality guaranteed to every client, supervisor, or colleague.

- 7) The criminal defense investigator will not violate any law during the performance of his professional responsibilities.
- 8) The criminal defense investigator will refrain from any professional activity that jeopardizes health or safety of another person.
- 9) The criminal defense investigator will refrain from any commitment that entails any inappropriate conflict of interest.
- 10) The criminal defense investigator will not engage in the unauthorized practice of law or represent himself/herself as a law enforcement officer.

Violation of the Code of Ethics may result in sanctions, including restrictions on and/or termination of membership and/or Board Certification.
